Up to twelve characters can compete in each race. One of the features of the series is the use of various power-up elements obtained by running into item boxes laid out on the course. These power-ups include mushrooms to give players a speed boost, Koopa Shells being thrown at opponents, and banana peels that can be laid on the pitch as hazards. The type of weapon received from an item box is often random, but sometimes influenced by the player's current position in the race. [3] For example, players who lag far behind can receive more powerful objects, while the manager will receive only small defensive items. Called elastic, this gameplay mechanism gives other players or computers a realistic chance to catch up with the leading player.
